

Weekly Operating Plan — Focus, Money and Training

Prepared for Aarav · 12–18 August 2026

You have 9 open tasks, 3 with deadlines this week, and spending is running 18% above your monthly average. Training is consistent but sleep is short. This plan sequences the week so deadlines land early and recovery improves.

Where you stand

Open tasks	9 (3 due this week)
Spend this month	1,240 of 1,050 average
Training	4 sessions, 210 minutes
Sleep	6.2h average

Priorities this week

1. Finish the physics lab report before Wednesday, it blocks two other tasks and carries the nearest deadline in your list.
2. Submit the Stanford supplemental essay draft for review.
3. Cut discretionary spending to 40 per day for the rest of the month.

Daily rhythm

Day	Deep work	Training
Mon	Lab report	Push
Tue	Essay draft	Rest
Wed	Submissions	Pull
Thu	Review	Legs

Money moves

- Pause food delivery for two weeks — it is your largest leak at roughly 210 this month.
- Move 100 to savings the day your allowance lands, before spending decisions happen.

- Review the two subscriptions you have not used in 30 days.

The one thing

Protect a 7.5 hour sleep window. Every other target in this plan gets easier when recovery is fixed first.

Notes

Your protein intake is trending under target on training days, which limits the gains from four sessions a week. Add one high-protein meal on Mon, Wed and Thu.

Reassess on Sunday: if spending is still above average, tighten the daily cap rather than cutting training or food quality.

Generated by AXIS from your logged data. Figures are estimates based on what you have tracked.